Background information on the Non-Financial Reporting Directive

The Non-Financial Reporting Directive – NFRD – \(Directive 2014/95/EU\) is an amendment to the Accounting Directive \(Directive 2013/34/EU\). It requires certain large companies to include a non-financial statement as part of their annual public reporting obligations. Companies under the scope of the NFRD had to report according its provisions for the first time in 2018 (for financial year 2017).

The NFRD applies to large Public Interest Entities with more than 500 employees. In practice it includes large listed companies, and large banks and insurance companies (whether listed or not) – all providing they have more than 500 employees.

The NFRD identifies four sustainability issues (environment, social and employee issues, human rights, and bribery and corruption) and with respect to those issues it requires companies to disclose information about their business model, policies (including implemented due diligence processes), outcomes, risks and risk management, and KPIs relevant to the business. It does not introduce or require the use of a non-financial reporting standard or framework, nor does it impose detailed disclosure requirements such as lists of indicators per sector.

The NFRD requires companies to disclose information “to the extent necessary for an understanding of the development, performance, position and impact of [the company’s] activities.” This means companies should disclose not only how sustainability issues may affect the company, but also how the company affects society and the environment. This is the so-called double materiality perspective.

In 2017, as required by the Directive, the Commission published non-binding guidelines for companies on how to report non-financial information. In June 2019, as part of the Sustainable Finance Action Plan, the Commission published additional guidelines on reporting climate-related information, which integrate the recommendations of the Task Force on Climate-related Financial Disclosures.

Current context

The non-financial information needs of users, in particular the investment community, are increasing very substantially and very quickly. The demand for better information from investee companies is driven partly by investors needing to better understand financial risks resulting from the sustainability crises we face, and partly by the growth in financial products that actively seek to address environmental and social problems. In addition, some forthcoming EU legislation, including the regulation on sustainability disclosures in the financial services sector \(Regulation \(EU\) 2019/2088\), and the regulation on a classification system \(taxonomy\) of sustainable economic activities, can only fully meet their objectives if more and better non-financial information is available from investee companies. The taxonomy regulation will require companies under the scope of the NFRD to disclose certain indicators of the proportion of their activities that are classified as sustainable according to the taxonomy.

The feedback received in the online public consultation on corporate reporting carried out in 2018 in the context of a fitness check that is currently being finalised by the Commission services, confirms that the non-financial information currently disclosed by companies does not adequately meet the needs of the intended users. The following problems have been identified:

1. There is inadequate publicly available information about how non-financial issues, and sustainability issues in particular, impact companies, and about how companies themselves impact society and the environment. In particular:
  - a. Reported non-financial information is not sufficiently comparable or reliable.
  - b. Companies do not report all non-financial information that users think is necessary, and many companies report information that users do not think is relevant.
  - c. Some companies from which investors and other users want non-financial information do not report such information.
  - d. It is hard for investors and other users to find non-financial information even when it is reported.
2. Companies incur unnecessary and avoidable costs related to reporting non-financial information. Companies face uncertainty and complexity when deciding what non-financial information to report, and how and where to report such information. In the case of some financial sector companies, this complexity may also arise from different disclosure requirements contained in different pieces of EU legislation. Companies are under pressure to respond to additional demands for non-financial information from sustainability rating agencies, data providers and civil society, irrespective of the information that they publish as a result of the NFRD.

In its resolution on sustainable finance in May 2018, the European Parliament called for the further development of reporting requirements in the framework of the NFRD. In December 2019, in its conclusions on the Capital Markets Union, the Council stressed the importance of reliable, comparable and relevant information on sustainability risks, opportunities and impacts, and called on the Commission to consider the development of a European non-financial reporting standard. In addition, ESMA recently published a report on undue short-term pressure on corporations where it recommends the Commission to amend the NFRD provisions.

In its Communication on the European Green Deal, the Commission committed to review the Non-Financial Reporting Directive in 2020 as part of the strategy to strengthen the foundations for sustainable investment. Meeting the objectives of the European Green Deal will require additional investments across all sectors of the economy, the bulk of which will need to come from the private sector. In this sense review of the NFRD is part of the effort to scale up sustainable finance by improving transparency.

The European Green Deal also stressed that sustainability should be more broadly embedded into the corporate governance framework, as many companies still focus too much on short-term financial performance compared to their long-term development and sustainability aspects. As part of the Sustainable Finance Action Plan, work is being undertaken to prepare a possible action in this area.

In addition, to ensure appropriate management of environmental risks and mitigation opportunities, and reduce related transaction costs, the Commission will also support businesses and other stakeholders in developing standardised natural capital accounting practices within the EU and internationally.

The services of the European Commission have published an inception impact assessment on the Review of the Non-Financial Reporting Directive. It summarises the problem definition, possible policy options and likely impacts of this initiative.

Objectives of this public consultation and links with other consultation activities

This public consultation aims to collect the views of stakeholders with regard to possible revisions to the provisions of the NFRD. The principal focus of this consultation is on the possible options for such revisions.

This public consultation builds on a number of recent consultation activities, including:

- An online public consultation on corporate reporting in 2018, in the context of the fitness check on the EU framework for public reporting by companies. That consultation enabled the Commission to gather data and views on the problems that need to be addressed with regard to non-financial reporting. Problem analysis is therefore not a principal focus of the current consultation strategy.
- A online targeted consultation on climate-related reporting in 2019, as part of the development of the new guidelines for companies on how to report climate-related information. In addition, the Technical Expert Group on Sustainable Finance organised a call for feedback on its recommendations with regard to reporting climate-related information. The results of these consultation activities, although specific to the issue of climate, are also useful when considering non-financial reporting more generally.

This consultation is one element of a broader consultation strategy in the context of the review of the NFRD. In addition to this open consultation, there will also be targeted surveys addressed to SMEs, and to companies currently under the scope of the NFRD. The targeted surveys will collect more detailed opinions and data from companies on certain issues, including costs related to non-financial reporting.

In addition, the services of the Commission will soon launch an open public consultation on a Renewed Sustainable Finance Strategy, seeking for stakeholders' views in other Sustainable Finance related issues, including questions related to sustainable corporate governance.

Please note: In order to ensure a fair and transparent consultation process only responses received through our online questionnaire will be taken into account and included in the report summarising the responses. Should you have a problem completing this questionnaire or if you require particular assistance, please contact fisma-non-financial-reporting@ec.europa.eu.

I agree with the personal data protection provisions

1. Quality and scope of non-financial information to be disclosed

The feedback received from the online public consultation on corporate reporting carried out in 2018 suggests that there are some significant problems regarding the non-financial information currently disclosed by companies pursuant to Directive 2014/95/EU \(“the Non-Financial Reporting Directive” or NFRD\) Likewise, ESMA’s 2018 Activity Report gathers evidence that shows there is significant room for improvement in the disclosure practices under the NFRD.

Question 1. To what extent do you agree or disagree with the following statements about possible problems with regard to non-financial reporting?

Please rate as follows:

1= totally disagree, 2= mostly disagree, 3= partially disagree and partially agree, 4= mostly agree, 5= totally agree

	1 (totally disagree)	2 (mostly disagree)	3 (partially disagree and partially agree)	4 (mostly agree)	5 (totally agree)	Don't know / no opinion / not relevant
The lack of comparability of non-financial information reported by companies pursuant to the NFRD is a significant problem.	<input type="radio"/>	<input checked="" type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>
The limited reliability of non-financial information reported by companies pursuant to the NFRD is a significant problem.	<input checked="" type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>
Companies reporting pursuant to the NFRD do not disclose all relevant non-financial information needed by different user groups.	<input type="radio"/>	<input checked="" type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>

Article 19a of the Accounting Directive (which was introduced into the Accounting Directive by the NFRD) currently requires companies to disclose information about four non-financial matters, if deemed material by the particular company:

- i. environment,
- ii. social and employee issues,

iii. human rights,

iv. bribery and corruption.

These correspond to the “sustainability factors” defined in Article 2(24) of Regulation (UE) 2019/2088 on sustainability-related disclosures in the financial services sector.

Question 2. Do you consider that companies reporting pursuant to the NFRD should be required to disclose information about other non-financial matters in addition to those currently set-out in Article 19a?

	Please specify which other non-financial matters (no more than 3):
Other non-financial matter #1	No
Other non-financial matter #2	N/A
Other non-financial matter #3	N/A

For each of the four non-financial matters identified in Article 19a of the Accounting Directive, and subject to the company's own materiality assessment, companies are required to disclose information about their business model, policies (including implemented due diligence processes), outcomes, risks and risk management (including risks linked to their business relationships), and key performance indicators (KPIs) relevant to the business.

Question 3. Are there additional categories of non-financial information related to a company’s governance and management procedures, including related metrics where relevant, (for example, scenario analyses, targets, more forward-looking information, or how the company aims to contribute to society through its business activities) that companies should disclose in order to enable users of their reports to understand the development, performance, position and impacts of the company?

	Please specify which additional categories of non-financial information (no more than 3):
Additional category of non-financial information #1	No
Additional category of non-financial information #2	N/A
Additional category of non-financial information #3	N/A

Investment in intangible assets currently represents the majority of investment carried out by the private sector in advanced economies. There is a long-standing debate about the need for better reporting of intangible investments in company reports, including in relation to sustainability<sup>1</sup>. Irrespective of the potential future changes to accounting standards, it is likely to remain the case that a significant proportion of intangible assets will fail to meet the definition of an asset or the criteria for recognition as an intangible asset in the financial statements. The Accounting Directive currently makes no explicit reference to intangible assets in the Articles concerning the management report, other than the requirement to report about activities in the field of research and development in Article 19(2)(b).

<sup>1</sup> The European Financial Reporting Advisory Group (EFRAG) is currently carrying out a research project on this topic. The United Kingdom's Financial Reporting Council issued a consultation document about business reporting of intangibles in 2019.

Question 4. In light of the importance of intangibles in the economy, do you consider that companies should be required to disclose additional non-financial information regarding intangible assets or related factors (e.g. intellectual property, software, customer retention, human capital, etc.)?

- Yes
- No
- Don't know / no opinion / not relevant

In addition to the provisions of the NFRD, several other EU legislative acts require disclosures of sustainability-related information for financial sector entities:

- The Regulation on prudential requirements for credit institutions requires certain banks to disclose ESG risks as of 28 June 2022.
- The Regulation on sustainability related disclosures in the financial services sector requires financial market participants to disclose their policies on the integration of sustainability risks in their investment decision-making process and the adverse impacts of investment decisions on sustainability factors, as of 10 March 2021.
- The Regulation establishing a framework to facilitate sustainable investment \(the Sustainable Finance Taxonomy\) creates new reporting obligations including for companies subject to the NFRD, starting in December 2021.

Question 5. To what extent do you think that the current disclosure requirements of the NFRD ensure that investee companies report the information that financial sector companies will need to meet their new disclosure requirements?

- Not at all
- To some extent but not much
- To a reasonable extent
- To a very great extent
- Don't know / no opinion / not relevant

In order to ensure that the financial service sector can comply with the new disclosure requirements there might be scope for better aligning the information required to investees and the one financial sector entities need to report themselves, e.g. as regards sustainability impacts.

Question 6. How do you find the interaction between different pieces of legislation?

You can provide as many answers as you want.

- It works well
- There is an overlap
- There are gaps
- There is a need to streamline
- It does not work at all
- Don't know / no opinion / not relevant

Question 7. In order to ensure better alignment of reporting obligations of investees and investors, should the legal provisions related to non-financial reporting define environmental matters on the basis of the six objectives set-out in the taxonomy regulation: (1) climate change mitigation; (2) climate change adaptation; (3) sustainable use and protection of water and marine resources; (4) transition to a circular economy (5) pollution prevention and control; (6) protection and restoration of biodiversity and ecosystems?

- Yes
- No
- Don't know / no opinion / not relevant

As a general point, it is important to take account of the current situation related to COVID-19. Companies are naturally focusing their efforts on dealing with this situation and EU policy-makers should also do so. Any initiatives which would disproportionately increase the administrative burdens and costs for companies now and in the coming years should be avoided, as this will reduce the resources available to companies to put the necessary measures in place to deal with the economic and social impacts of the crisis.

The summary of responses to the 2018 public consultation on company reporting noted that for the majority of respondents, the EU framework for public reporting is coherent, effective and relevant for achieving its objectives. A significant majority of respondents also agreed that the non-financial reporting framework is sufficiently coherent. BUSINESSSEUROPE therefore considers that the current EU legislative framework on disclosure of non-financial information remains valid to a large extent.

We note however that a majority of respondents highlighted that current disclosure practices might not always meet the growing demand for data and information from investors and other stakeholders. When judging whether non-financial reporting practices meet certain objectives, it should be on the basis of justified needs of stakeholders rather than expectations, which sometimes go beyond this. In certain cases, investors and other stakeholders can have different, sometimes conflicting demands, e.g. regarding the level of detail of the information, which are creating additional reporting burdens for companies without real added value. Also, it is difficult, if not impossible to report adequately to all stakeholders in one report, without compromising the relevance for some user groups. Therefore, companies should, for instance have the possibility to report on the non-financial information relevant to users/investors separate from other non-financial reporting, if this adds value from a company perspective.

The diversity between companies means that ensuring comparability through non-financial reporting is very difficult if not impossible, even within sectors. Where comparability is necessary, at the very least, a company should have flexibility to report on the sustainability information considered material/relevant, taking into account its specificities.

Also, reporting cannot be seen only pursuant to the NFRD, as companies disclose additional relevant information in other ways, including pursuant to other frameworks and voluntarily.

It is not appropriate to add new topics to the reporting obligations - the scope is necessarily broad to be relevant for different companies and stakeholders, also based on the materiality check. Prescribing in an overly detailed way or defining in the legislation the matters that companies have to report on, would take away this important flexibility. It is also important to retain the possibility for companies to not disclose sensitive business information, as keeping this confidential is crucial to avoid detrimental impacts on the commercial position of the company.

The development of new reporting requirements, in particular via the taxonomy regulation, risks leading to different and overlapping requirements, causing extra burdens for companies and confusion also for stakeholders. Therefore, streamlining the various obligations should lead to simplification and clarification. This means avoiding as much as possible prescribing numerous detailed requirements in legislation, but rather taking a broad principles-based approach. Since environmental objectives are outlined in the taxonomy regulation, it would make sense to assess whether it is useful and necessary to align with this in view of consistency, by reflecting them in the NFRD. This assessment would have to take account of how to avoid creating inconsistencies with other matters covered in the NFRD. Also, the specific matters that a company reports on under NFRD should remain based on its assessment of what is material to their business and stakeholders. This is also one of the findings of the recent EFRAG report on climate related reporting -<http://www.efrag.org/Assets/Download?assetUrl=/sites/webpublishing/SiteAssets/European%20Lab%20PTF-CRR%20%28Main%20Report%29.pdf>, which recommends companies should avoid reporting generic information, without a prior materiality assessment.

2. Standardisation

Note: in this section, the word “standard” is used for simplicity. This should not be read as a suggestion that all relevant reporting requirements must be specified in a single normative document. Rather, “standard” is merely used as a shorthand that could encompass a consistent and comprehensive set of standards. Reporting standards define what information companies should report and how such information should be prepared and presented.

A requirement that all companies falling within the scope of the NFRD report in accordance with a common non-financial reporting standard may help to address some of the problems identified in section 1 (comparability, reliability and relevance).

Question 8. In your opinion, to what extent would a requirement on companies to apply a common standard for non-financial information resolve the problems identified?

- Not at all

- To some extent but not much
- To a reasonable extent
- To a very great extent
- Don't know / no opinion / not relevant

Question 9. In your opinion, is it necessary that a standard applied by a company under the scope of the Non-Financial Reporting Directive should include sector-specific elements?

- Yes
- No
- Don't know / no opinion / not relevant

A number of non-financial reporting frameworks and standards already exist. Some, including the standards of the Global Reporting Initiative (GRI), the framework of the International Integrated Reporting Council (IIRC), and the standards of the Sustainability Accounting Standards Board (SASB), aim to cover most or all relevant non-financial issues.

Question 10. To what extent would the application of one of the following standards or frameworks, applied on its own, resolve the problems identified while also enabling companies to comprehensively meet the current disclosure requirements of the Non-Financial Reporting Directive, taking into account the double-materiality perspective (see section 3)?

On 5 December 2019, the Economic and Financial Affairs Council adopted conclusions on deepening the Capital Markets Union, in which it invited the Commission to “consider the development of a European non-financial reporting standard taking into account international initiatives”.

Most existing frameworks and standards focus on individual or a limited set of non-financial issues. Examples include the recommendations of the Task Force on Climate-related Financial Disclosures (TCFD), the UN Guiding Principles Reporting Framework (human rights), the questionnaires of the GDP (formerly the Carbon Disclosure Project), and the standards of the Climate Disclosure Standards Board (CDSB). Several approaches have also been developed at EU level in the environmental area, including the Organisation Environmental Footprint and reporting under the Eco-Management and Audit Scheme (EMAS).

Question 11. If there were to be a common European non-financial reporting standard applied by companies under the scope of the NFRD, to what extent do you think it would be important that such a standard should incorporate the principles and content of the following existing standards and frameworks?

Small and Medium-Sized Enterprises (SMEs) often do not have the technical expertise nor resources necessary to prepare reports in accordance with state-of-the-art, sophisticated standards. This may imply that requiring SMEs to apply the same standards as large companies may be a disproportionate burden for SMEs.

At the same time, many SMEs are under increasing pressure to provide certain non-financial information to other businesses, in particular if they are suppliers of large companies. In addition, financial institutions are increasingly likely to request certain non-financial information from companies to whom they provide capital, including SMEs. In this respect, SMEs that do not provide non-financial information may experience a negative impact on their commercial opportunities as suppliers of larger companies or on their access to capital, and may not be able to benefit from new sustainable investment opportunities.

Question 13. In your opinion, would it be useful for there to be a simplified standard and/or reporting format for SMEs?

- Yes

In the responses to the Commission's public consultation on public corporate reporting carried out in 2018, just over half of the respondents believed that integrated reporting could contribute to a more efficient allocation of capital and agreed that the EU should encourage integrated reporting.

The current NFRD already provides an EU 'standard' for non-financial reporting, even with differences in some requirements re national implementation, as with EU directives. It provides an adequately broad framework for different companies to report non-financial information coherently; prescribes topics for companies to report on, allowing for reporting on more specific topics based on materiality; prescribes aspects companies must report on and where to report, whilst leaving necessary flexibility to adapt to different sectors, business models, stakeholders, tailored to the company's practices/activities. Many companies also voluntarily report non-financial aspects, through company-led initiatives. This market-driven approach should not be hindered through lack of flexibility. So, an additional EU non-financial reporting 'standard', prescribing information companies should report on and how to present it in a binding way, is unnecessary and would add to reporting burdens without real added value. A 'standard' defining how information should be prepared is not appropriate, as it would interfere in internal management processes of the company - its prerogative. To ensure competitiveness of European companies operating globally, reporting frameworks would in principle be more appropriate at international level, taking account of existing frameworks/standards. However, if a 'standard' does not specify aspects in a single normative document, rather highlights and takes account of benefits and limits of relevant existing frameworks/standards and aspects therein, in a way which guides rather than prescribes, this would have added value. It would be a preferable way to ensure usefulness, understanding and applicability for companies and stakeholders. Such 'standards' would not be an obligation for companies, to take account of companies' constraints in reporting, particularly cost of producing data and sensitivity of some information. Providing examples of internal systems and processes, (how to assess risks to business performance, engage with relevant stakeholders, define material topics), and providing examples of reporting methodologies, would be useful. This is precisely what the non-binding guidelines failed to do. Since more companies now link some aspects of financial and non-financial information, guidance to companies that do wish to move in this direction could be useful, including referring to relevant international frameworks. However, it should remain companies' choice not an obligation and should not lead to extra reporting. It should support those companies wanting to move in this direction, on how selected non-financial information can be presented together with financial information, where relevant for key stakeholders of the financial reports, i.e. investors. Companies should retain possibility to report other non-financial information separately. Referring to one standard/framework alone would not help, as they have different methodologies/approaches. Companies need flexibility to combine most relevant parts of existing frameworks/standards. Creating a simplified 'standard' for SMEs would not avoid demands from other companies, so they can meet their own reporting requirements. However, a simple voluntary reporting format for SMEs, helping provide information requested by larger companies, could be useful. Guidance could be provided to larger and smaller companies on how to do this effectively with least burdens. Investors require some level of non-financial information from companies to make sustainable investment decisions. It's important in providing capital to the real economy. But companies report to a much wider range of stakeholders in different ways, providing different information. It is unrealistic to expect that one standard can meet all stakeholder demands and provide a basis for a variety of reporting purposes, or a single reporting can be relevant for all users. If 'standard' does not mean a single normative document, a regulatory approach involving national/EU supervisory authorities, standardisation bodies, is not appropriate. It would allow regulators to go beyond requirements in the legislation, e.g. through delegated acts, probably adding unjustifiable company reporting burdens. Any initiative must be developed in cooperation with the real economy. Since companies as a whole prepare non-financial reports, involving different company functions (legal, procurement, management, sustainability), it's important to allow these to feed into any discussions/process, to ensure requirements added value, technical and economic feasibility.

EFRAG board would be best place to develop such a framework, ensuring good representation of stakeholders and national standard setters. EFRAG reporting lab needs to improve representativeness and governance. This would also be appropriate way to provide European input into any international discussions on developing reporting frameworks.

3. Application of the principle of materiality

The NFRD requires companies to disclose information “to the extent necessary for an understanding of the development, performance, position and impact of [the company’s] activities.” This materiality principle implies that companies reporting pursuant to the NFRD must disclose (i) how sustainability issues may affect the development, performance and position of the company; and (ii) how the company impacts society and the environment. This is the double-materiality perspective (see also the Commission’s non-binding guidelines on reporting climate-related information, section 2.2, page 4). The two “directions” of materiality are distinct although there can be feedbacks from one to the other. For example, a company that with severe impacts on the environment or society may incur reputational or legal risks that undermine its financial performance.

‘Material’ information is defined in Article 2(16) of the Accounting Directive as “the status of information where its omission or misstatement could reasonably be expected to influence decisions that users make on the basis of the financial statements of the undertaking. The materiality of individual items shall be assessed in the context of other similar items.” This definition is geared towards financial reporting, which is principally intended to serve the needs of investors and other creditors. By contrast, non-financial information serves the needs of a broader set of stakeholders, as it relates not only to the increasing impact of non-financial matters on the financial performance of the company, but also to its impacts on society and the environment. This may imply the need to provide an alternative definition of materiality for application in the context of non-financial reporting, or at least additional guidance on this issue.

Question 21. Do you think that the definition of materiality set-out in Article 2 (16) of the Accounting Directive is relevant for the purposes of determining which information is necessary to understand a company’s development, performance and position?

- Not at all
- To some extent but not much
- To a reasonable extent
- To a very great extent
- Don’t know / no opinion / not relevant

Question 22. Do you think that the definition of materiality set-out in Article 2 (16) of the Accounting Directive is relevant for the purposes of determining which information is necessary to understand a company’s impacts on society and the environment?

- Not at all
- To some extent but not much
- To a reasonable extent
- To a very great extent
- Don’t know / no opinion / not relevant

Question 23. Is there is a need to clarify the concept of ‘material’ non-financial information?

- Yes
- No
- Don't know / no opinion / not relevant

Question 23.1 If you do think there is a need to clarify the concept of 'material' non-financial information, how would you suggest to do so?

5000 character(s) maximum

including spaces and line breaks, i.e. stricter than the MS Word characters counting method.

We do not see a need to change the definition in the directive, as it is generally well-known and understood by companies and necessarily broad and flexible. The concept of materiality should however be clarified through non-binding guidance and by highlighting existing guidance/good practice. This should consider the following elements:

When discussing materiality, it is necessary to firstly identify the primary users and the purpose of the information for that/those user groups. Then the company can evaluate whether certain information is material, i.e. significant and should therefore be provided, and what information is not material and can therefore be omitted. The company itself may also deem a topic material, without it being highlighted by stakeholders. This should take account of which topics/risks/opportunities would reasonably be expected to influence the performance of the company and on which aspects does the company have an impact on society/environment.

Materiality is defined across the company, with the involvement of the different functions, including the sustainability/reporting role, legal aspects and procurement functions for example, and in particular the overall management of the company. This is essential to have buy-in across the company for providing the information, but more importantly to embed it in the overall business and investment strategy.

While there can be links between non-financial aspects/impacts of a company and its financial performance, when assessing whether a topic is material or not, financial and non-financial aspects cannot be treated in exactly the same way. What is important is to consider which non-financial information is relevant from a financial point of view, and whether it should therefore be included in the annual report, or whether depending on the materiality for stakeholders other than those targeted by the annual report (investors), it would be better provided in a separate document.

Question 24. Should companies reporting under the NFRD be required to disclose their materiality assessment process?

- Yes
- No
- Don't know / no opinion / not relevant

Please provide any comments or explanations to justify your answers to questions 21 to 24:

5000 character(s) maximum

including spaces and line breaks, i.e. stricter than the MS Word characters counting method.

Companies must have flexibility to put in place frameworks for reporting which are adapted to their very different situations, i.e. the sector and markets in which they operate, their size, business activities, business model and the different users of the information. This is essential for companies to be transparent and accountable to their stakeholders in a way that supports and enhances their business performance and competitiveness overall.

The fact that the current directive allows companies to assess whether or not a topic is material, i.e. relevant to their business overall, and then to tailor their reporting to this, is a crucial element. What is considered a material topic will be different from one company to another, even within a sector.

While companies should not be legally obliged to disclose their materiality assessment process, more guidance or highlighting of good practices on the methodologies and processes to assess materiality would be useful for companies. This should highlight to companies, in what conditions it can be useful to explain, where appropriate, to stakeholders, how the materiality assessment process is being done, in terms of increasing trust of stakeholders and an understanding of the implications of reporting for the company.

4. Assurance

The NFRD requires that the statutory auditor or audit firm checks whether the non-financial statement has been provided if a firm falls within the scope of the Directive.

Article 34 of the Accounting Directive requires that the financial statements are audited, and that the statutory auditor or audit firm express an opinion whether the management report (i) is consistent with the financial statements for the same financial year; and (ii) has been prepared in accordance with the applicable legal requirements. Article 34 of the Accounting Directive also requires the statutory auditor or audit firm to state whether it has identified material misstatements in the management report and to give an indication of the nature of such material misstatements. However, the non-financial statement published pursuant to the NFRD – whether contained in the management report or a separate report – is explicitly excluded from the scope of Article 34 of the Accounting Directive. Consequently, the NFRD does not require any assurance of the content of the non-financial statement.

Question 25. Given that non-financial information is increasingly important to investors and other users, are the current differences in the assurance requirements between financial and non-financial information justifiable and appropriate?

- Not at all
- To some extent but not much
- To a reasonable extent
- To a very great extent
- Don't know / no opinion / not relevant

Question 26. Should EU law impose stronger assurance requirements for non-financial information reported by companies falling within the scope of the NFRD?

- Yes
- No
- Don't know / no opinion / not relevant

There are two types of assurance engagement a practitioner can perform:

- Reasonable assurance reduces the risk of the engagement to an acceptably low level in the given circumstances. The conclusion is usually provided in a positive form of expression and states an opinion on the measurement of the subject matter against previously defined criteria.
- Limited assurance engagements provide a lower level of assurance than the reasonable assurance engagements. The conclusion is usually provided in a negative form of expression by stating that no matter has been identified by the practitioner to conclude that the subject matter is materially misstated.

Question 27. If EU law were to require assurance of non-financial information published pursuant to the NFRD, do you think that it should require a reasonable or limited assurance engagement on the non-financial information published?

- Reasonable
- Limited
- Don't know / no opinion / not relevant

Question 28. If EU law were to require assurance of non-financial information published pursuant to the NFRD, should the assurance provider assess the reporting company's materiality assessment process?

- Yes
- No
- Don't know / no opinion / not relevant

Question 29. If assurance of non-financial information was required by EU law, should the assurance provider be required to identify and publish the key engagement risks, their response to these risks and any related key observations (if applicable)?

- Yes
- No
- Don't know / no opinion / not relevant

Question 30. If assurance of non-financial information was required by EU law, do you think that assurance engagements should be performed based on a common assurance standard?

- Yes
- No
- Don't know / no opinion / not relevant

Question 31. Do you think that an assurance requirement for non-financial information is dependent on companies reporting against a specific non-financial reporting standard?

- Yes
- No
- Don't know / no opinion / not relevant

Question 32. Do you publish non-financial information that is assured?

- Yes
- No
- Don't know / no opinion / not relevant

Please provide any comments or explanations to justify your answers to questions 25 to 32:

5000 character(s) maximum

including spaces and line breaks, i.e. stricter than the MS Word characters counting method.

Non-financial information should not be treated in the same way as financial information, in particular regarding the need for assurance/auditing, as the nature of the information is different. While financial reporting in general provides quantitative information, which can be clearly defined and measured, the meaningfulness of non-financial reporting often depends on qualitative information and context, which despite the possibility in some cases to have a standardised approach, it is very difficult to have a standardised measurement across different companies. Mandatory auditing would also lead to disproportionate costs, in many cases without added value. If reporting entities wish to provide extra assurance, they are free to do so, by considering this in relation to the identified, primary users and purpose of the information. It should therefore be left to the company to decide if they wish to include an assurance /audit of their non-financial statement or of part of it. It is also important to note that auditors are not always the sole relevant provider of assurance on non-financial reporting.

5. Digitisation

The EU has introduced a structured data standard, the European Single Electronic Format (ESEF) under the Transparency Directive. With effect from 1 January 2020 listed companies in the EU shall report their annual financial reports in XHTML (audited financial statements, management report and issuer's responsibility statements). Additionally, if the consolidated financial statements are prepared in IFRS, the XHTML document should also be tagged using iXBRL elements specified in the ESEF taxonomy. This allows the information to be machine-readable. This is expected to produce a number of benefits, including cost saving for users of annual financial reports, greater speed, reliability and accuracy of data handling, improved analysis, and better quality of information and decision-making.

Additionally, the Commission is exploring opportunities to establish a single access point for public corporate information. In this respect, the Commission expects the High-level Forum on CMU to examine this topic and formulate recommendations from the Capital Markets angle in the coming months.

Question 33. To what extent do you agree or disagree with the following statements regarding digitalisation of non-financial information?

Please rate as follows:

1= totally disagree, 2= mostly disagree, 3= partially disagree and partially agree, 4= mostly agree, 5= totally agree

	1 (totally disagree)	2 (mostly disagree)	3 (partially disagree and partially agree)	4 (mostly agree)	5 (totally agree)	Don't know / no opinion / not relevant
It would be useful to require the tagging of reports containing non-financial information to make them machine-readable.	<input checked="" type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>
The tagging of non-financial information would only be possible if reporting is done against standards.	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input checked="" type="radio"/>
All reports containing non-financial information should be available through a single access point.	<input checked="" type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>

Question 34. Do you think that the costs of introducing tagging of non-financial information would be proportionate to the benefits this would produce?

- Not at all
- To some extent but not much
- To a reasonable extent
- To a very great extent
- Don't know / no opinion / not relevant

Question 35. Please provide any other comments you may have regarding the digitalisation of sustainability information:

5000 character(s) maximum

including spaces and line breaks, i.e. stricter than the MS Word characters counting method.

Whilst, if done in the right way, there can be benefits of tagging information in general to provide easier digital access, we believe that the usefulness of electronic reporting in relation to non-financial information is highly questionable and that any potential benefits would be outweighed by the risks. These include comparing aspects or data which are not comparable (even between companies in the same sector) or taking data out of context, which can lead to a false representation of the information or make it less understandable. More thorough evaluation is necessary before any decision is taken on this.

6. Structure and location of non-financial information

The default requirement of the NFRD is that companies under scope shall include their non-financial statement in their annual management report. However, the NFRD also allows Member States to allow companies to disclose the required non-financial information in a separate report under certain conditions, and most Member States took up that option when transposing the Directive. Companies can be allowed by national legislation to publish such a report up to six months after the balance sheet date.

The publication of non-financial information in a separate report has a number of consequences, including:

- separate reports that include non-financial information are out of the legal mandate of the national competent authorities, whose mandate over periodic reports is limited to the annual and semi-annual financial reports (which include the management report).
- separate reports that include non-financial information are not required to be filed in the Officially Appointed Mechanisms (OAMs) designated by Member States pursuant to Article 21(2) of the Transparency Directive.

Question 36. Other consequences may arise from the publication of the non-financial statement as part of a separate report. To what extent do you agree with the following statements:

Please rate as follows:

1= not at all, 2= to some extent but not much, 3= to a reasonable extent, 4= to a very great extent

	1 (not at all)	2 (to some extent but not much)	3 (to a very reasonable extent)	4 (to a very great extent)	N. A.
The option to publish the non-financial statement as part of a separate report creates a significant problem because the non-financial information reported by companies is hard to find (e.g. it may increase search costs for investors, analysts, ratings agencies and data aggregators).	<input checked="" type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>
The publication of financial and non-financial information in different reports creates the perception that the information reported in the separate report is of secondary importance and does not necessarily have implications in the performance of the company.	<input checked="" type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>

Question 37. Do you believe that companies should be required to disclose all necessary non-financial information in the management report?

- Yes
- No
- Don't know / no opinion / not relevant

Question 38. If companies are allowed to publish the required non-financial information in a report that is separate from the management report, to what extent do you agree with the following approaches?

Please rate as follows:

1= totally disagree, 2= mostly disagree, 3= partially disagree and partially agree, 4= mostly agree, 5= totally agree

	1 (totally disagree)	2 (mostly disagree)	3 (partially disagree and partially agree)	4 (mostly agree)	5 (totally agree)	Don't know / no opinion / not relevant
Legislation should be amended to ensure proper supervision of information published in separate reports.	<input checked="" type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>
Legislation should be amended to require companies to file the separate report with Officially Appointed Mechanisms (OAMs).	<input checked="" type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>
Legislation should be amended to ensure the same publication date for management report and the separate report.	<input checked="" type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>

Question 38.1 Please provide any comments regarding the location of reported non-financial information:

5000 character(s) maximum

including spaces and line breaks, i.e. stricter than the MS Word characters counting method.

The possibility for companies to choose whether to provide a non-financial statement separately to or together with the management report is an important flexibility. This takes account of different company's needs in terms of when and where it is relevant to publish it, which depends on the company's general internal processes and systems and those specifically for reporting, as well as on the users of the statement. For example, flexibility to report separately to investors and to other stakeholders with different frequency or timing is important to companies. Considering that this is only an option in the EU legislation, as an exception to the general rule, to be decided by national governments, the fact that many Member States have implemented it confirms its importance. And since this is an option, it does not stop companies providing the non-financial statement together with the management report, if they wish to do so.

Therefore, whilst linking the non-financial statement and the financial management report is an option chosen by some companies, making this mandatory is neither appropriate nor necessary. It should remain the choice of each company. Also, publishing the non-financial statement separately does not make it less relevant, as this suggests that non-financial information is only important if linked to the financial results of a company. A stand-alone non-financial statement can also be equally easy to find, if it is published on the company's website or elsewhere. One option could be to ask companies in the scope of the directive to publish their non-financial statements on a central website, to make them more visible. A balance should be found between the obligations on the company in terms of making the statement available and the demands made by stakeholders, in particular investors which should be reasonable and justified.

The management report, including the non-financial statement, aims to provide a company's stakeholders with the information necessary to understand the company's development, performance, position and impact. Some non-financial information is also reported in the corporate governance statement, which is also part of the management report.

Question 39. Do you consider that the current segregation of non-financial information in separate non-financial and corporate governance statements within the management report provides for effective communication with users of company reports?

- Not at all
- To some extent but not much
- To a reasonable extent
- To a very great extent
- Don't know / no opinion / not relevant

Please provide any comments or explanations to justify your answers to questions 36 to 39:

5000 character(s) maximum

including spaces and line breaks, i.e. stricter than the MS Word characters counting method.

Companies need flexibility to provide non-financial information in different ways to different users – some users may prefer to have non-financial information provided within the management report, some may prefer it to be provided separately, also to the corporate governance statements. It would be difficult, if not impossible to meet the needs of all the stakeholders of even one company with a single method for reporting non-financial information. And this without even mentioning an EU level harmonised method. A much better approach is to leave it to the companies to devise their own reporting frameworks, in collaboration with their relevant stakeholders to take account of their different needs.

7. Personal scope (which companies should disclose)

The NFRD currently applies to large Public-Interest Entities (PIEs) with more than 500 employees. In practice this means large companies with securities listed in EU regulated markets, large banks (whether listed or not) and large insurance companies (whether listed or not) – all provided that they have more than 500 employees.

The Accounting Directive defines large undertakings as those that exceed at least two of the three following criteria:

- a. balance sheet total: EUR 20 000 000;
- b. net turnover: EUR 40 000 000;
- c. average number of employees during the financial year: 250.

Some Member States have extended the personal scope of the NFRD by lowering the threshold to 250 employees, in effect capturing all large PIEs.

Companies that are a subsidiary of another company are exempt from the reporting requirements of the NFRD if their parent company publishes the necessary non-financial information at consolidated level in accordance with the NFRD.

There are a number of potential arguments to support the extension of the personal scope of the NFRD:

- Changes in the legislative framework: following the adoption of the Regulation on sustainability-related disclosure in the financial services sector and of the Taxonomy Regulation, investors may require non-financial information from a broader range of investees in order to comply with their own sustainability-related reporting requirements.
- Large unlisted companies can have significant impacts on society and the environment. There may therefore be no a priori reason to differentiate between listed and non-listed companies in this respect. In addition, the difference in treatment between listed and non-listed companies in this regard may serve as a disincentive for companies to become listed, and therefore undermine the attractiveness of capital markets.
- Exempting PIEs that are subsidiaries limits the information about impacts on society and the environment, thus undermining the ability of stakeholders of such exempted subsidiaries to hold them accountable for their impacts on society and the environment, especially at local and national level.

Question 40. If the scope of the NFRD were to be broadened to other categories of PIEs, to what extent would you agree with the following approaches?

Question 42. If non-listed companies were required to disclose non-financial information, do you consider that there should be a specific competent authority in charge of supervising their compliance with that obligation?

- Yes
- No
- Don't know / no opinion / not relevant

Due to the nature of their activities, credit institutions and insurance undertakings have larger balance sheets than non-financial corporations. Hence, the vast majority of such institutions will exceed the balance sheet threshold in the definition of large undertakings set-out in the Accounting Directive. Moreover, the application of some public disclosure requirement of EU prudential regulation for credit institutions and insurance undertakings is defined based on various size thresholds.

For example:

- the Regulation on prudential requirements for credit institutions and investment firms includes in its definition of large credit institutions those with a total value of assets equal to or greater than EUR 30 billion;
- the same Regulation defines small and non-complex institutions as those that have EUR 5 billion or less total assets;
- the consultation paper published by EIOPA in October 2019 proposes to revise article 4 thresholds of Solvency II (below which entities are excluded from the scope of Solvency II), doubling the thresholds related to the technical provisions (from EUR 25M provisions to EUR 50M) and allowing Member States to set the threshold referring to premium income between the current EUR 5M and until a maximum of EUR 25M.

Question 43. To what extent do you agree with the following statements relating to possible changes of the personal scope of the NFRD for financial institutions?

The current scope of the NFRD remains valid and we do not agree on broadening it. We note, however that a number of Member States have broadened the scope in transposing it. This should remain a decision at the national level.

However, it would be worth exploring with member states and stakeholders the benefits and disadvantages they have experienced in coverage in national implementation of the EU directive, of large non-listed companies and large companies which are established in the EU but listed outside, in view of safeguarding the global competitiveness of EU companies. In this respect, the retention of the possibility for companies that are subsidiaries of a parent company that reports non-financial information at group level in accordance with the NFRD, is crucial. This would also have to take account of existing reporting requirements in regions outside the EU, as well as international standards/framework, with the aim of achieving an international level-playing field.

The majority of Member States have transposed the NFRD requirements into national legislation making very few changes to the wording of the legal provisions. Therefore, in the majority of the national legal frameworks, companies are required to comply with national legislation that is quite high level, not very prescriptive and do not require the use of any particular reporting standard.

The NFRD provides a fairly clear, broad and flexible enough framework for non-financial reporting by different companies. This is the right approach. However, despite this, there is still demand on companies to provide non-financial information from a multitude of stakeholders, but in particular investors. Sometimes this is based on the needs of the user, but it can also be based on unjustified expectations of what information companies are able to provide and excessive demands. It remains difficult for EU legislation to provide a reporting framework, which meets the non-financial information expectations of such a diverse range of users, as it would need to be so excessively detailed and prescriptive that it would be overly complex and costly to put in place. It would also no doubt still not avoid demands for information from specific stakeholders.

For this reason, BusinessEurope has always called for a broad, principles-based framework, which each company can tailor to its own situation, in cooperation with its stakeholders.

More support and guidance could, however, be given to companies to assess what is material and to develop reporting methodologies. Collaboration between real economy companies and users, in particular investors, would also be beneficial to exchange views on the needs of the users and the realistic requests and requirements that can be put on companies.
